With a song in my heart

Theme . . . The Finished Symphony

Follow, Dear Reader, on the wings of song into the pre-audition hush. Await there the downstroke of the master baton which will carry you through the overture, the interlude, the prelude and finally to the FINISHED SYMPHONY of the class of 1947.

The Brass Choir Extolling . . .

Middle row—Joan Hoiss, Catherine Hanley.

Dedication

We, the Seniors of Aquinas Dominican High School, do proudly dedicate this, our memory book, to a much beloved faculty. May its record of the years spent under their loving tutelage be an added contribution to a long line of noble and inspiring deeds. As conductors of the entire Aquinas orchestra, with its winds, brasses, percussions and strings, they have developed the students' symphonic ode into one of the greatest classical symphonies — the voice of human feelings.

Smiling in the Garden - 1944

Remember as "Green Freshies" how we learned by heart the words of the Loyalty Song. Its association recalls the night we sang it when with shaky step and shakier knees we made that first bow to Aquinas society. The next day we posed under the stately poplars which accented our height and gave us a grown-up feeling and a security that we were on the "in" of Aquinas. It wasn't just a song but a sort of doctrine that followed us through our school life. Each assembly began with it and its poignant expressions caused the seniors to use it as the inspiration for the TAQUIN OF '47.

It's the School that Takes Our Aim

School was a blessing; fruit to be enjoyed,
Also a friend which life itself employed.
Happiness romped through the hour-stained halls,
Answering to the million names we called.
Seldom were sobs, and many were the joys;
Trickery reigned behind well-trained poise.

Mirth ran its merry race beside our fears,
Chuckling at our jokes; the walls had ears.
Silence, a guest, whose person was renowned,
Seldom within our laughing halls was found.
Still, though our looks were wise and so profound,
Tales twice our age were told and carried round.

Sing Girls Along the Path of Life

The slow march, with its practiced step adds joy and yet a sort of leaden feeling as each girl takes a step away from the school of her dreams and anticipates the happiness of receiving the diploma of her achievement. Wending through the path in her leaf-shadowed gown thoughts of the strain "Sing girls along the path of life" — brings a smile as each Aquinite hopes for a rosy future. — Edwardine Gunterberg

Lift High the Heart

As the music commences our hearts are one in rising above material things to welcome the magical touch of our True Maestro. He listens while the strings of our hearts resound the greatest symphonic chords of all and magnetize our Praise unto Glory!

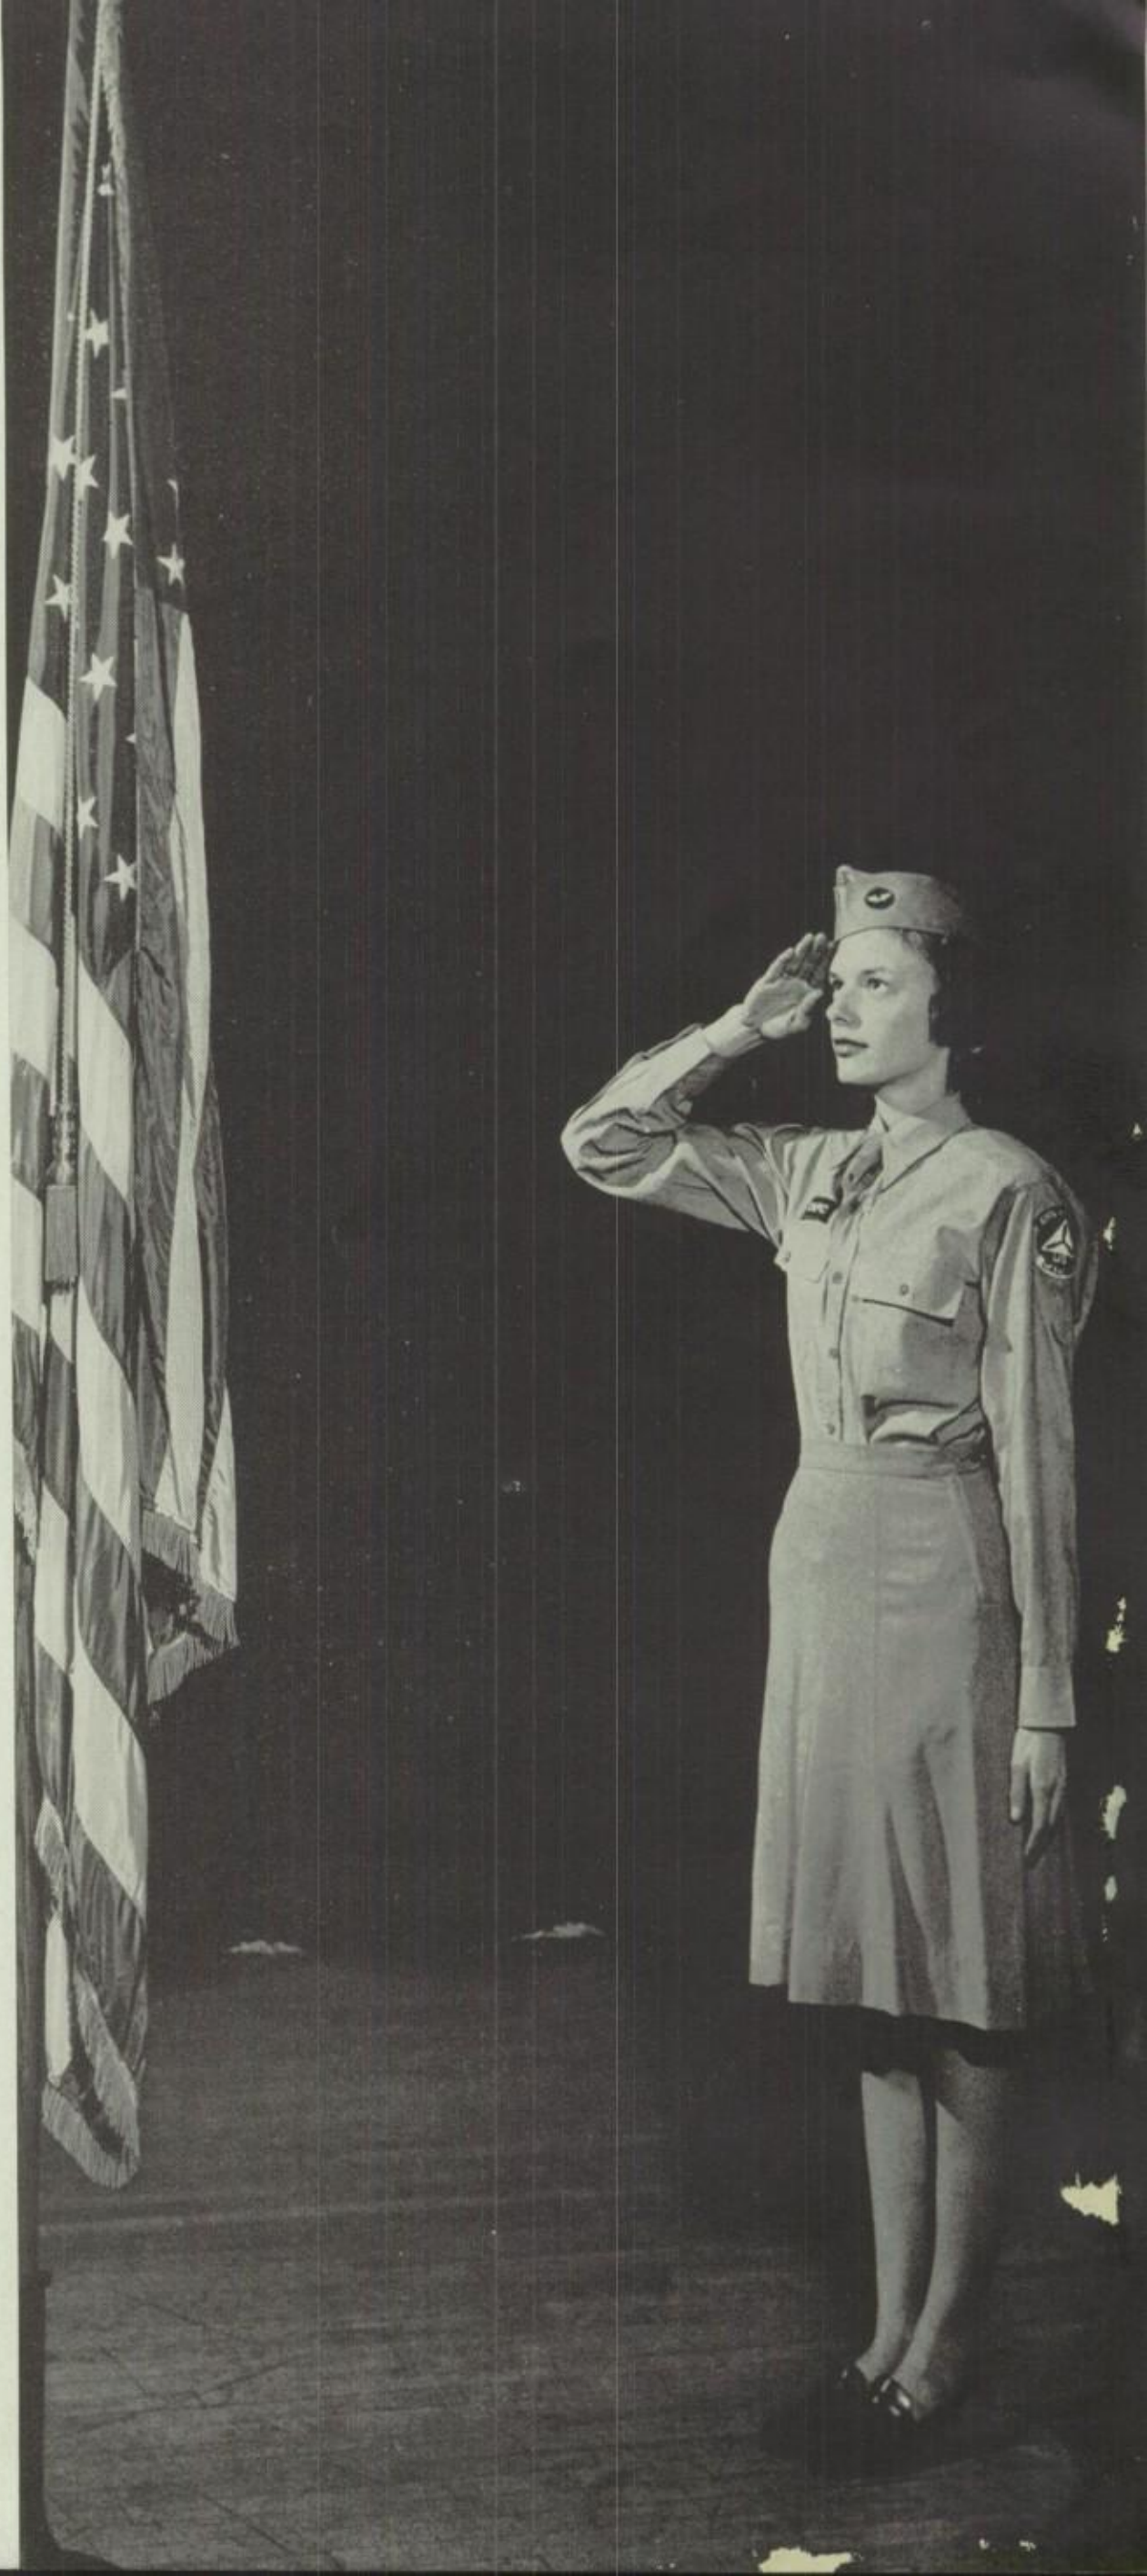
Lift High the Head

The senior girls are looking toward a new horizon of melody, but with heads lifted high, they say in unison . . . "Hail Aquinas! We will e'er be true to you."

Lift High the Eye

Strains of the Star Spangled Banner emerge from the Aquinas Bill of Fare . . . Strains that personify the great democracy in which we live. It is easy to see that the American spirit predominates in the sublime symphony that the "Yankee Doodle Dandies" of Aquinas are presenting to you, now.

—Joan McGurk



American Youth

Part of the music which praises You,
Part of the song of life . . .

We are a part of the holy theme
Swelling o'er earthly strife.

Notes of that sacred song we are,
Formed by You, for our part . . .

Rising toward heav'n celestially
Straight to Your Sacred Heart.

Freshmen we were as a tiny note;
Sophomores, matured we seemed . . .

Now toward the last we've grown through You
Into a brilliant theme . .

—Mary Ann McBreen

The Juniors . . . The Andante Movement . . . Crossing the Bridge . . .

Akin to the second movement of the great sonata, the ANDANTE, the Juniors are "crossing the bridge" to the other side, the Senior realm. Being a year older and a year wiser has made them a little more serious though still retaining that jolly Junior aspect. Hope lies before them and a responsibility to take over the leadership of the class of 1948.

The Sophomores . . . The Allegro . . With Speedy Tempo . . .

So like the ALLEGRO movement with its fast, lively gait, the Sophomores still retain that "teen girl" spirit of doing all things in a hurry. Life is just that rosy bed where nary a weed may thrive. The school curriculum gave them the hardest subjects; undaunted they survived.

The Freshmen . . . The Presto Movement . . . Quick and Alert

The fourth movement of the sonata, the PRESTO, adequately describes the Freshmen mood with its impulsiveness, its feverish activity and ready wit . . . ever on the alert the "greenies" devour school subjects so new and entertaining. Algebra puzzles, Latin confuses, General Science delights and English is just the same . . . a Freshman soliloquy.

American Truth

Tho' frozen be the wasteland North
And desolate the ground,

Tho' parched and dry, both earth and sky
In other climates found.

Tho' heat should scorch and leave no life
And cold should freeze each bud,

A fruit there is which blossoms still
Among such waste and mud.

And truth shall ever blossom forth
'Mid lies and hates and fears.

The only fruitless land we have
Is life with truthless years.

The Bass Choir Announcing . . .

Left to right—Top row—Betty Neville, Paula Long.

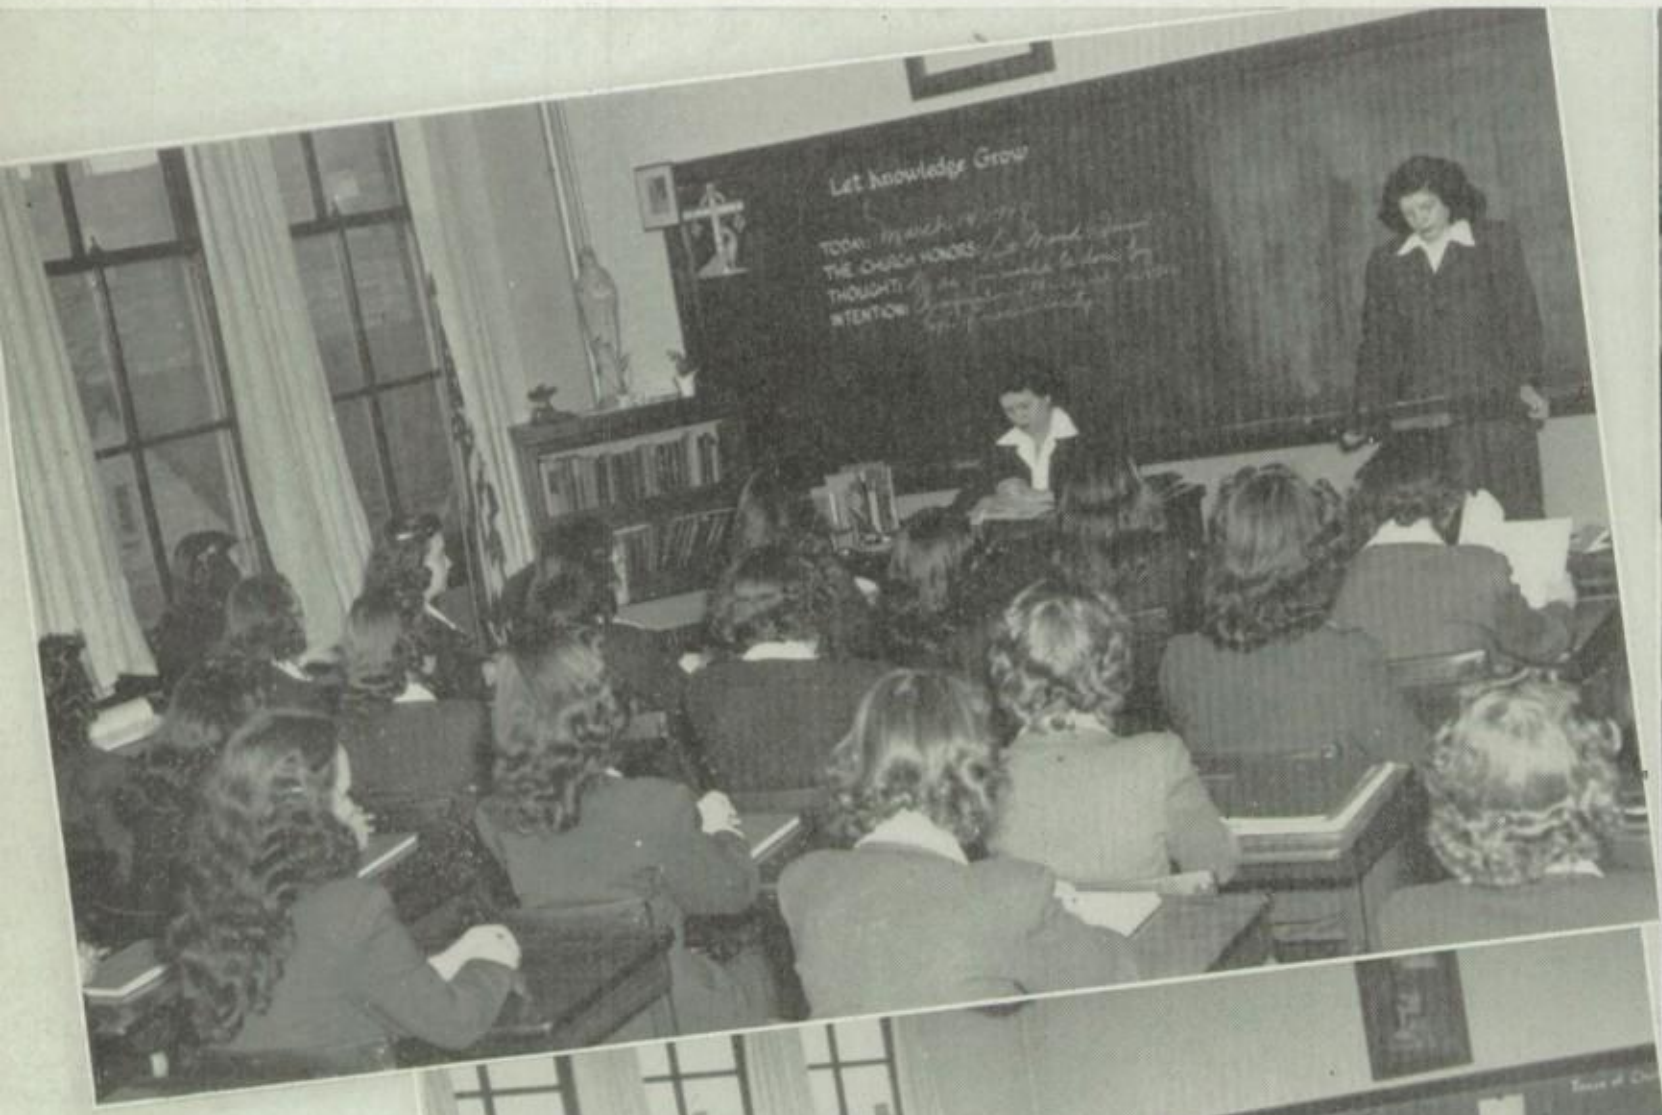
Religion - - Binding Man and God

Assembled in prayerful posture; the serenity of the room . . . silent listening to poetic sonnets of love for the God Child awakens devotion and deep thought. Below, Gloria Burke, of the senior class gives her mental prayer to fellow classmates.



Lectures, sodality meetings, tests, discussions and quizzes are provided to keep classes lively, and speaking of liveliness, cheerful Joan Carey, chairman of this quiz, provides interesting thought-provoking questions. — Kathleen Howard

Nourishing the Spiritual

Seniors of Room 202 listen intentively while Ella Knopf explains the point for the day. A new thought is awakened, a saintly model is suggested and a religious practice is formulated. A new day begins for the Aquinite and a new hope for her individual betterment rallies her to bind herself more closely to her Maker.

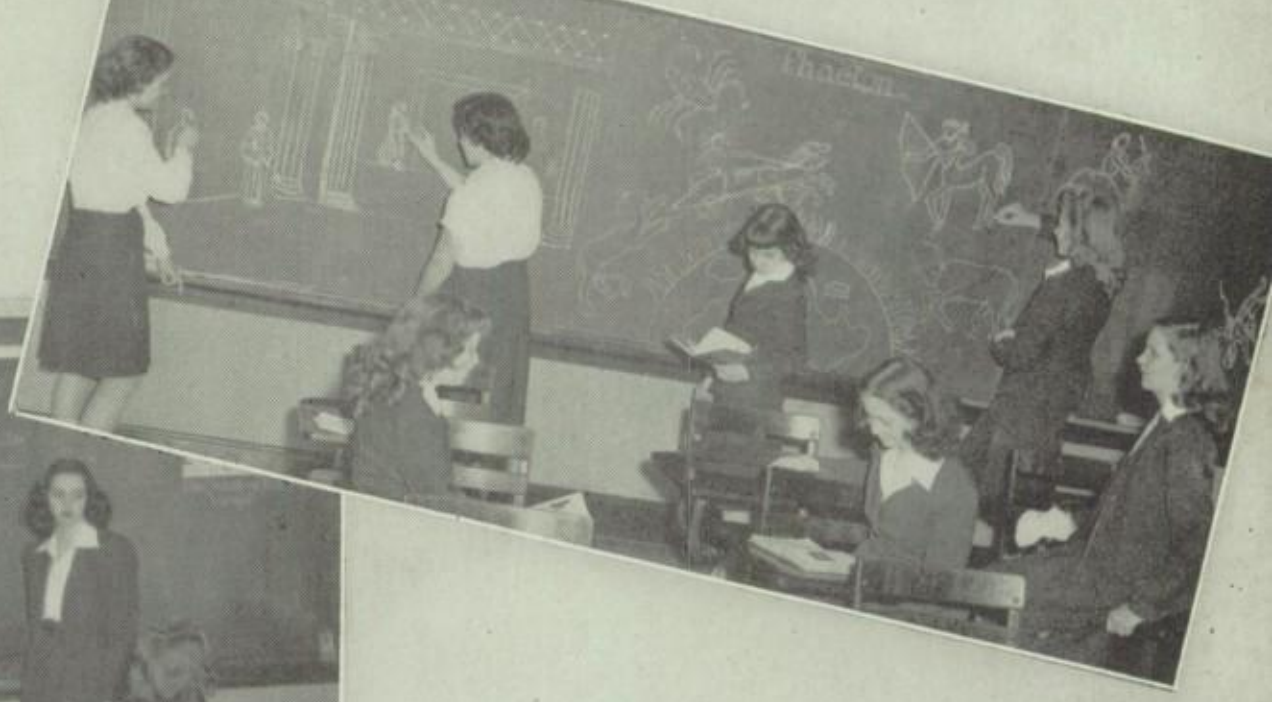
When weighty problems of an ethical nature are too far reaching and difficult, the Aquinite can turn to the spiritual director of Aquinas, Reverend Joseph Hedderman, who weekly visits each religion class and freely dispenses sacerdotal wisdom. The problems and pitfalls of marriage he explains so that she may be guided in her choice and may make her marriage a blessing toward a future happiness.

Latin, the Language of the Gods

Rome, land of Emperors, myths and the Latin language, transferred by translating. Latin students enter the land of classical myth, and sketch Helois, God of the Sun, riding, shining in his Phaeton, chariot of the Sun.

Susanne Hubble, Margot Bachtell and Lucille Stegmaier are shown scanning lines of the famous poem, the Aeneid by Virgil.

Auxilium Latinum is the key to the modern Latin student. Auxilium Latinum gives students enjoyment in reading stories, jokes and working puzzles in the ancient language thus revived.



Spanish, the Language of the People

Great works of art are created by Spanish descendants of our neighbors to the South. Above are a few collector items admired and sold by Joan Kapple, Mary Ann Nemec, Marion Johnson and Jane Cunnea.

Aquinas is proud of the good will furthered by Paula Long in her prize-winning essay on Brotherhood; and Paula is happy about the prize, a good will tour Mexico.

"LITTLE MEXICO" with all its colorful pageantry and song and life passed before the students in the Spanish II Class dramatization of that title. The picture tells the story of living a language and loving its people, its customs, its costumes and its beauty. — Jeanne McDonough

The Junior English class doing research work in the library.

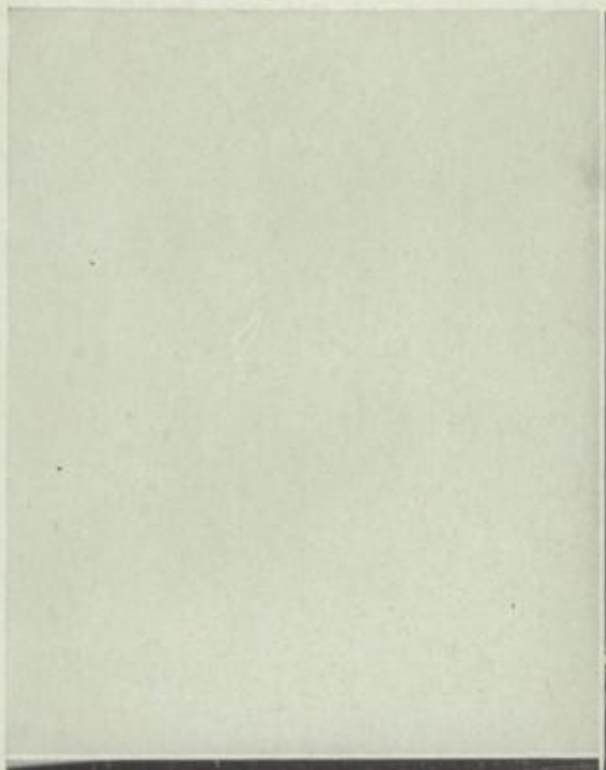
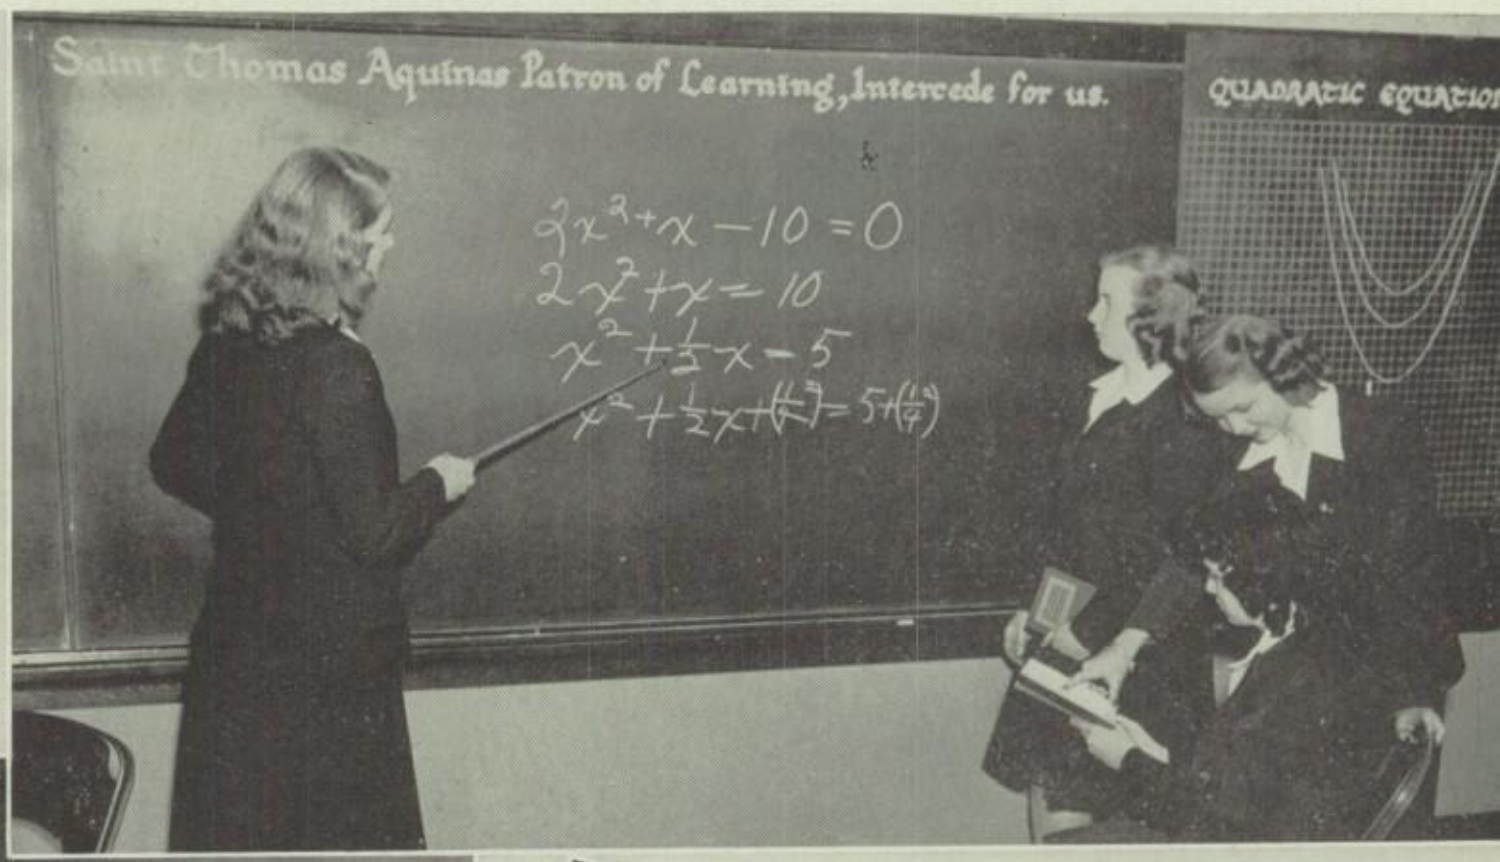
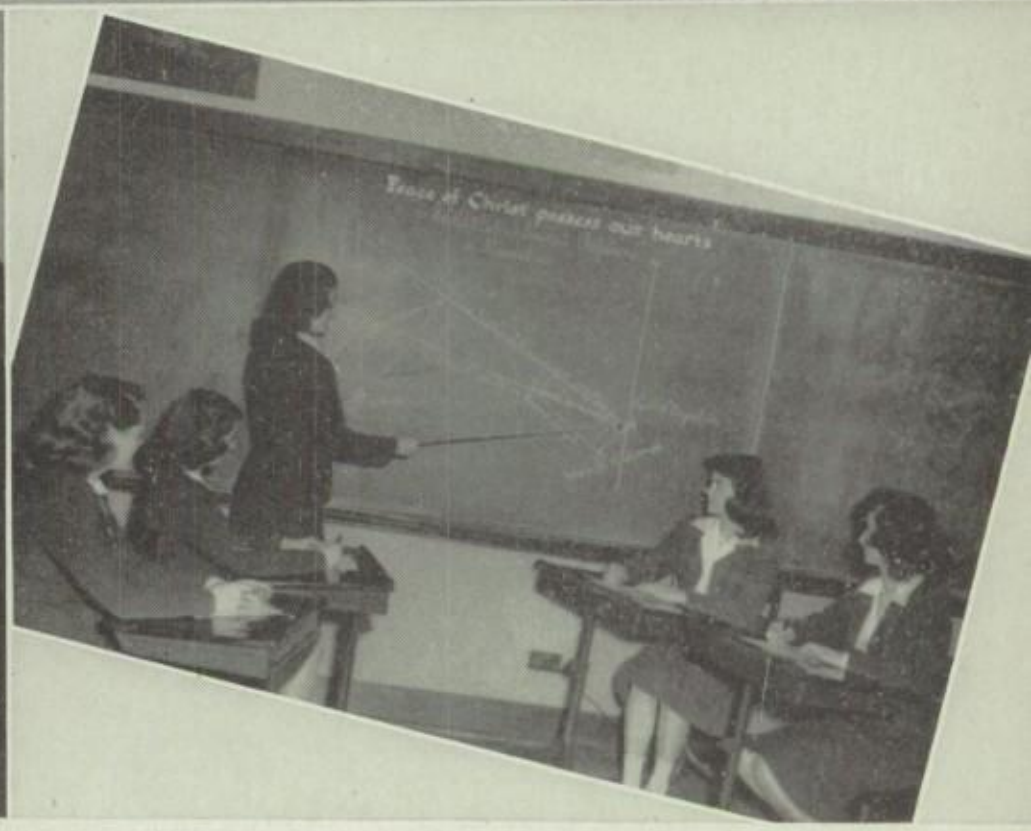
Enjoying the Native Tongue - English

Every Aquinite hopes to bear with her the polish and refinement so characteristic of the Convent-bred girl. As her speech will betray or "make" her socially, all efforts in the English classes are centered on the proper use of English. To relieve the tedium of drill, the pleasure of reading, of enacting the great stories of our English heritage, and of ardent study needed for term paper research, form a happy part of the school curriculum. Delving into the immortal classics, she will know why Ophelia went mad, and the reason for Hamlet's duel . . . While the Juniors revel in tragedy, their lighter-minded sisters, the Sophs, enact in make-believe costumes the Calpurnia-Caesar request—"Do not leave this house tonight!"

Upon which the World doth hinge . . .
Mathematics







Plotting the Quadratic on a graph, the Aquinite questions? A Parabola? A Circle? An Ellipse? Or maybe an hour's labor will reveal an inconsistency. These are the problems that tax men's minds and send worrisome girls "dithering."

The thought of a binomial equation that can be solved in four ways makes Freshies weak and X still remains the unsolved and unknown. Abstract Algebra is a good trainer in precision and accuracy, so necessary in the study of Chemistry and Physics.

Running around in circles . . . trying hard not to fly off at a tangent . . . Sophs seeking to find the end of a line . . . Playing with pi that is never baked . . . Seeing radicals that are not Russians . . . Squaring and not using a square . . . All in a day's life in Math.

Delving into the Unknown . . . In a Test Tube

Frosh Scientists await developments as with a wonder spirit a chemical reaction takes place in a test tube. The purpose of the General Science Class is to instill an interest in the field of science. Many topics of advanced science are touched upon, and scientific interest is aroused.

Surrounded by scientific wonders the avid Freshmen devour the discoveries that the drama of science unfolds before them. This year they have studied water distillation, air pressure, food content, electricity and have touched on the laws and rules governing the abstract sciences.

Young Biologists Working, Investigating

Before them lay the day's allotment of food. The "Why" of their energy value, biologists Valerie Hayes, Mary Ann Ahern and Patricia Kelly solve by peering through a test tube. In its hidden depths the starch and sugar content of that baked potato, apple pie and morning toast reveal not only the increase of calories but that added curve to mi-lady.

ST SEW AND SEW

AND SEW ON--- TO THE FAS

And so they sew . . . but not always with a view to model on a stage but rather to be an artist for their own enjoyment. For a mere pittance a work of their own artistry can envelop them. Being thrift-conscious, the sewing enthusiast may concentrate her efforts from making a simple dish towel or pot holder to an elaborate evening gown.

It's fun to be asked to pose for a picture in a dress of your own creation. There's such a feeling of self-satisfaction — knowing that you will be different when you walk down the street. And remodelling has come into its own. Any dress can be made 'a la vogue' by adding that tailored look or by remaking its style to add that glamorous touch.

AING

Sewing enters into one's life so intimately and housecoats add that warmth to cold, chilly mornings. It's nice to go to college with a wardrobe designed by you, for you and one that enhances your charm.

Their contribution was "AN ALICE IN WONDERLAND" story in which a modern Alice walked out of her mirror on to the stage amid the "OH'S" and "AH'S" of her envious onlookers who wished that they had signed up for the Sewing Class

And Sew Alike . . . as did Geraldine Feeney who sees the Birdie with baby Mary whose Dutch boy outfit she designed to match BIG SISTER'S SUMMER ENSEMBLE. Wouldn't it be nice if all Aquinites could step out in style with their little sisters? Teen and infant-teen would both beam with original poise and charm.

The Christmas Pageant Unfolds

As the traditional story of the Crossroads began to unravel, the rich voice of Mary Jane Ryan was heard recalling this miracle of the ages. This tale enkindled the flame of faith once more in the hearts of all who listened.

Gilt-toned voices of the choral groups blended with the flickering candles of the remainder of the student body, as the praise-lending procession passed before the humble manger group containing the Lord and Savior of all men.

Humble shepherds of the field, as portrayed by Dolores Schallerer, Mary Jane Sawyer, Sally Tegtmeyer, Helen Muckian, Marjorie Quinnan, and Lorraine Martin, come to adore their new-born King, and to offer their simple gifts.

Under the able and efficient guidance of Mrs. Louise D. Ffrench, the Dramatic department completed a happy and successful year.

Lights dimmed, except for the brilliant spot-light that centered on the Virgin and her Precious Babe. The night was chill, but love warmed the hearts of all.

Joanne Gere

The Christmas Tide brings the Madonna

The Madonna of the Crossroads, as portrayed by Madeline O'Reilly, spreads her cloak of peace and love over all in the joyous and festive season of Christmas. She longed for one thing, the perfect gift of love and sacrifice.

Long ago, when Knighthood was in flower, a goodly knight, Sir Wenceslaus by name, called his lady to him and told her of his plan to build a statue of her at the Crossroads. She, however, requested a shrine of the Blessed Virgin.

A strange, almost unearthly peace resided over the auditorium as the nativity scene was relived once more. Thousands of times this tale has been retold but each time it brings with it into the hearts of men, new faith and love.

"THY SPEECH DOTH DISCOVER THEE" is taken to heart by the speech enthusiasts of Aquinas who make a daily check-up with a view to improve this great gift of God to man. The school furnishes countless opportunities to practice as the students in turn announce over the school microphone, or for variety's sake they make talk over the teacups. Pictured here they are indulging in "chin-chat" of the parlor variety. Madeleine O'Reilly, Merit Award Committee Head, tabulates merit points, announces winning candidates and distributes the coveted "A" pins to the outstanding twenty-five girls who have earned the highest average each semester.

Active Student Council Inspires Youth

An alive and realistic organ of the Student Council is the Student Court. Its weekly sessions are well presided over by the judges, bailiffs and clerk. Retiring Senior Judge, Pat Considine (seated), Senior Judge, Jean Carey (standing), and newly elected Junior Judge, Mary Frances Wrenn (seated), pass the dreaded verdict of guilty.

Democratic-minded, the Aquinas faculty and "Student-sparked" Council officers combine to form an efficient, straight-forward governing group for the student body. Officers: President, Dolores Wall, Vice President, Madeleine O'Reilly, Secretary, Pat Barron, and Treasurer, Helen Muckian, informally discuss plans for the coming year.

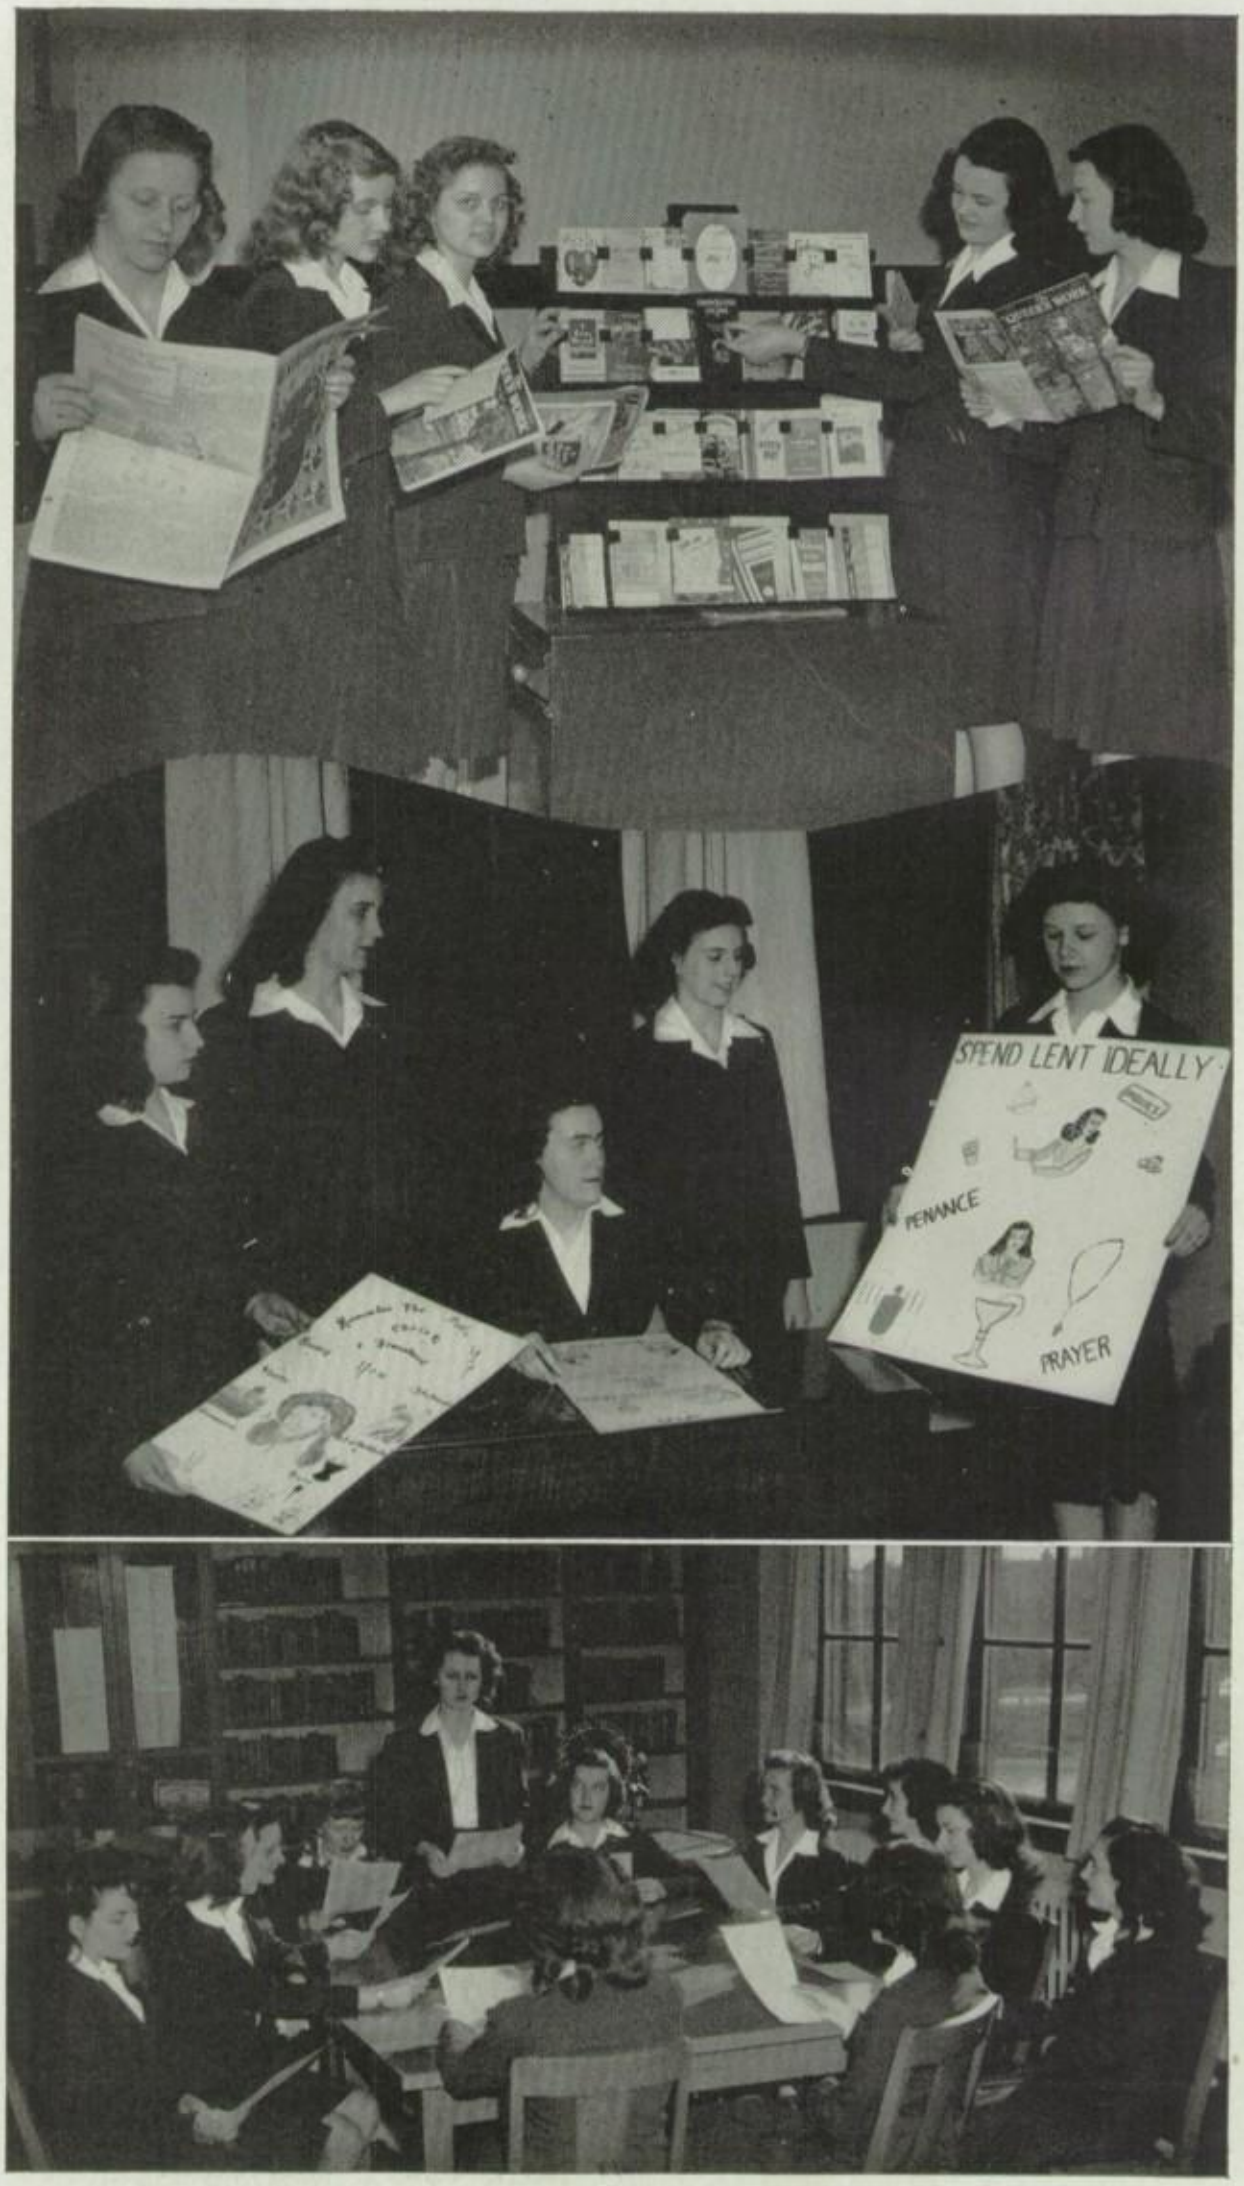
The Divine Life moves Sodalists to read only what Mary would like for a child of hers. The Literature Committee consists of M. T. Drazba, E. Brogan, M. Maluck, M. Houle, and M. A. Grant.

Christ-conscious Sodalists are stimulated through the direction of Ann Burns and the members of the E.O.L. Committee: D. Neitzel, I. Dandurand, M. Reynolds, and S. Voss.

Mary Manion arouses the Bull Session with her challenge: "But — I am a Catholic." In their daily lives, the Sodalists try to live out what they have "hashed over" at the Session.



Flood my soul with Thy Spirit

Beat that Deadline!!

Fashions, gym news, and editorials are written by these reporters and staff members. Feature articles and news items seem to fall into the hands of these observant girls. They are the "back bone" of the press for when the editors "call" the reporters are always ready to produce. Several hours are spent after school in choosing the "right selections to please the readers."

A round table discussion on the Junior Issue of "The Aquinas." What to feature, where to ferret the news, the lines per article and other major problems fall upon this class. Next year J. Ferris and P. McHugh will take over as Co-editors. Page editors will be E. Brogan, J. Shaughnessy, L. Nicholson, L. Janos, R. Nessenger, R. Brown, M. O'Hara, and J. Dwyer. — H. L. Barrett

Eight issues of "this" publication have been circulated to various schools. Under the guidance of their "advisor" these students bring further co-operation between faculty and press members which play an important role in producing a first class paper.

"The Aquinas"

Editor Edwardine Gunterberg suggests a new dress for "The Aquinas" with editor Joan McGurk; many new ideas, styles, and articles are discussed in order to present the student body with a sparkling paper. Page I editors, Mary Carol McDivit and Mary Ellen Frank; Page II editors, Joan Hurley and Mary Ann McBreen; Page III editors, Jean Carey and Ann Burns; and Page IV editors, Margot Bachtell and Helenlou Barrett, have drawn up each issue on the first of the month.

Taquin came to life a second year. With it are fond memories of life at Aquinas in 1946-47. Its tale is not just a story but a sort of autobiographical sketch of Aquinas life. Its composition is the work of students telling their story of hopes, dreams and ambitions. The Press hopes it will add a little beauty to a sordid world.

Throbbing with Aquinas Activities

The Aquinas Athletic Association is the pulse of Aquinas High School. Through this organization throbs a never-ending flow of activities. The Homecoming Dance, skating parties, and bike hikes have given the Aquinite a healthy glow.

Rosemary Kill has added her vivacious charm and wondrous talent to enliven the A.A.A. pep meetings during the past year. The Drum Majorette Corps has quickened many hearts and inspired the needed enthusiasm for dear old Aquinas.

The officers of the A.A.A. have held the pulse at their capable fingertips. Jeannine Nelson, Dolores Schallerer, Dorothea Schallerer, Miss Esther Bergman, Mary Lou Curley, and Mary Ann Hardin have untiringly filled out the prescriptions.

The Aquinas Girls--Work and Play

Webster defines play as, "action to amuse oneself." The gymnastic curriculum is brimming over with action, fun, excitement, and aching muscles. Fortunately, work and play are synonymous for most Aquinites, "Work is play and play is work!"

Capability, concentration, and coordination are the requirements to maintain perfect balance on the parallel bars. Eileen Weber, Dolores Schallerer, and Jo Ellen Fagan are a personification of these virtues. Perfection is the reward.

Exercise...Exertion...Enjoyment...Excitement

One, two, three, four, up, down, up, down, THAT was the gym class. Marching in one's, two's and four's, then splitting up into row upon row, and removing those creaks, became the order of the day.

During the track meet, the high jump became one of the main events, perfect muscle control is necessary to get over that bar at just the right angle. Donna Meyering is our good example.

A fast game of ping-pong is on, like ever so many more games that took place during the ping-pong tournament. Here Dolores Wall and Jeannine Nelson have some fun with Mary Lou Schaeflein refereeing.

Then Sing Girls . . .

Dazzling, living diamonds and emeralds sparkle under the glitter of dancing lights. The scene is early evening on an oasis. The radiant jewel of the desert, Nana, stands in the twilight dreaming of her adventurous rogue, Benarulah. Meanwhile, Betty, an American guest, meets the intriguing, young Lieutenant Andrews. When Betty was alone, Nana appeared to reveal her secret love. Once all had retired for the night she crept out into the darkness to bid him goodbye. In the midst of all this, there was a touch of humor and gaiety in the form of Lady Grady and the background of Londoners.

and Send the Strains Above

Colorful costumes, flirtation dances, billowing skirts of the ballet, blend in picturesque pageantry of the "Jewels of the Desert." Carrieall sways the thoughts of the starry-eyed Nana. The Freshmen Chorus artistically portrayed a panorama of foggy London, contrasted by cheery New York. Poor Caesar, crippled from "a noddin' and a bobbin'" on his camel receives nary a thanks from the ungrateful Professor. The "Jewels of the Desert" will be engraved in the Aquinas annals as true artistry.

A Resume of the Choral Year

The Aquinas Choral Club contributes much beauty to the life of Aquinas. "As a thing of beauty is a joy forever," "The singing girls" of the school hold their audience in rapt attention as they chant the Benediction hymns of praise, particularly the Panis Angelicus.

Christmas comes "and the angels sing." A Christmas message, a Hallelujah chorus rings praise to God by choral girls on tiers in the auditorium. 'Mid snow and ice and chilly north winds they find their way to the suffering sheep of His flock in hospitals throughout the city. As always, our girls led in the choral festival with the rating, "excellent."

The operetta is their special concern in which they enacted a jewel of pageantry. The operetta, "The Jewels of the Desert," had a double cast, the second of which is pictured. The cast of characters is as follows:

Abdullah	Rita Nessinger, Catherine Ffrench
Professor Lythe	Mary Catherine Donoghue, Patricia McHugh
Nana	Patricia Considine, Frances Moran
Caesar	Alice Quinnan
Miss Lythe	Donna O'Beirne, Helen Ann McGovern
Betty	Marie Campbell, Peggy Martin
Carrieall	Peggy Winterfield
Lieutenant Andrews	Donna Jeane Roussey, Nancy Fisher
Cheeko	Joan Schneider, Barbara Gavin
First Arab	Eileen Mintefering
Benarulah	Betty McClain, Peggy Pfordresher

The culmination of a successful year comes with the eighth annual music festival for all Catholic high schools of the Archdiocese, as they join four hundred voices as one.

Joy in Everything - Highlight on Fun

A Good Time? . . . Yes! !

"Long live the Queen!" The Homecoming ended in a blast of fanfare as Jeannine Nelson was crowned Queen of the evening, surrounded by her court, Mary Ann Hardin, Dolores and Dorothea Schallerer, and Mary Lou Curley. The coronation was climaxed by the traditional Grand March.

Blue jeans didn't mean blue "Janes" the night of the memorable Senior Barn Dance. These posturing sophisticates provided the rural flavor, (cider and doughnuts helped!); the local color was blinding!

Cupid wielded his bow and arrow so expertly that every heart laughed and danced in harmony. Clusters of multi-colored balloons decorated the dance floor, and escorted a few couples home. St. Valentine chaperoned.

—Mary C. McDivit

The "Snow Ball" thrown by the Senior Class proved to be a Smashing Hit!!

Homecoming

Somewhere over the Rainbow Room, a clear November sky was the limit for Homecoming excitement. Although the dance was open only to upper classmen, their spirits were "All-High." The dance was a wonderful success, thanks to the girls who solicited patrons and bids. Joan Schneider and Barbara Gavin proved to be the persuasive powers of the school by bringing in fifty patrons each. As a reward for such exceptional energy, they were presented a trip to Washington. — Susanne Hubbell

In Gratia . . .

The Sanctuary is dark,
But for a glowing light of red.
And there it is that thoughts and dreams
And hopes and prayers are bred.
For as creation is an art
And life itself a grace,
It pleases me to sit beside
The Maker of our race.
Close to the sacred vigil light
In quiet awe I sit,
And solitude surrounds the room,
And makes a tomb of it.
But for the burning candle
Which casts its flickers here,
Peacefully quiet is this place,
And tranquil and austere.

Mystically, almost weirdly,
The God of Heav'n is there.
And I am here beside Him
And His love is everywhere.
Nor need one word be uttered.
Nor need a breath be spent,
For understanding builds its bridge
Of mental firmament.
I cannot sit beside my God
And of thanks speak no word.
For even though no lips should ope'
My heartfelt thanks is heard.
The gratitude that fills my frame
Is like unto a stream
Which swells into a demon tide
To swamp the land, 'Twould seem.

But here I find a quiet hand
To calm the rising tide.
And as before, the waters,
By the Maker's will, abide.
This, not so humble, heart I have
I prostrate 'neath Your eyes,
To thank You for the blessing
Of my earthly paradise.
